The patented ball lock enables permanent and secure locking even under the most difficult conditions and influences. Due to its unique and patented locking mechanism, the ball has been developed in such a way that it cannot be loosened or slipped. The cable tie itself features rounded edges to protect cables and users, and goes through multiple production processes to ensure the highest level of security. The self-locking feature allows the tie to be securely hand tightened without additional installation steps. The stainless steel cable ties are available in different hardness classes and with full, partial or no coating. Different colors are also available for marking to complete the Pan-Steel range. In addition, the Pan-Steel range offers numerous approvals, for example for shipbuilding, special versions for special high tensile strength and much more. The stainless steel cable ties are available in different lengths and widths as well as packaging sizes.
